Summer Skin survival...

How can I banish my brown spots?

It is important to first understand what causes brown spots. Here's how it works: melanocyte skin cells produce melanin, which is the pigment responsible for tanning. These skin cells produce pigment in the skin in response to various stimuli or damage, including UV rays from the sun and cuts and scratches on the skin. The pigment becomes trapped in the melanocytes--as well as in the surrounding skin--and appears as brown spots. The most effective way to remove these spots is to start a regimen that includes a lightening agent, a retinol and full spectrum sunblock without chemicals to decrease melanin production, which in turn reduces the appearance of the dark spots. After a minimum of 2 weeks prepping the skin, IPL treatments or Timeless peels will eliminate brown spots. IPL works by shocking the cells into releasing the pigment, which is then reabsorbed into the body. Timeless peels will accelerate the cell turn over process, bringing pigment to the skins surface for disposal. Depending on the clients skin type and the severity of discoloration, three to six treatments are generally recommended with a maintenance regimen.
